Roman Baroque Art: The History Of A Style

Although the Baroque style was strongly associated with the power and authority of the Roman Catholic Church, it was the power and authority of the Catholic Church that led to the Baroque style and the Baroque movement. The Baroque style was a reaction against the Gothic style, which was characterized by simplicity and restraint. The Baroque style was characterized by elaborate ornamentation and dramatic effects, and it was seen as a way of expressing the power and majesty of the Catholic Church.

The Baroque style was developed in Rome, and it was the Baroque period that saw the development of the Baroque style in Italy. The Baroque style was characterized by a sense of movement and dynamism, and it was this sense of movement and dynamism that led to the development of the Baroque style in Italy.

The Baroque style was not confined to Italy, however. It was also found in other parts of Europe, and it was in these other parts of Europe that the Baroque style developed in its own unique way. The Baroque style was characterized by a sense of movement and dynamism, and it was this sense of movement and dynamism that led to the development of the Baroque style in Italy.

The Baroque style was characterized by a sense of movement and dynamism, and it was this sense of movement and dynamism that led to the development of the Baroque style in Italy.